It has been busy but here it is. This past summer, my parents decided to move out of their home and into a house in the state they have been visiting, Florida. Florida for two months or so at a time. Well, it's a small town (I believe it's called Port St. Lucie, Florida), and the people there are pretty friendly. However, my parents have always been very strict when it comes to safety and don't usually like to take many chances with safety, so they didn't want to bring us with them as they felt it was too risky. So, we had to come with them, and that was a whole other story. In my eyes, it wasn't that bad. We had plenty of activities to do during the weekdays, and on the weekends, we would spend a lot of time at the beach, so the boredom factor was gone. However, we had to spend about 4-5 hours a day on the bus, and sometimes, the bus would be late or the bus would stop at an inconvenient time. Other times, there were rides that we would have to pay money to, and that would add even more to the time. To add to that, there were times when my parents wouldn't make money transfers or just couldn't get to their bank account for a week or two. That made me mad because all the money we had saved up had just been gone, and that

ABSTRACT This is a proposal to conduct a five year mentored (K23) research project with the long term goal of becoming an independent investigator. The study is designed to provide a rigorous experimental foundation for a pilot study examining treatment strategies for tinnitus in children. In particular, we aim to conduct a pilot randomized control trial (RCT) to evaluate whether non-invasive, behavioral interventions for tinnitus in children are associated with reduced tinnitus severity. Over the past 20 years there has been tremendous growth in the number of children who seek treatment for tinnitus and related comorbidities. Although tinnitus is thought to be one of the most prevalent conditions of childhood, no controlled studies to evaluate the efficacy of treatments for tinnitus in children have been reported in the literature. Lack of controlled studies and a poor understanding of the pathophysiology of tinnitus have contributed to the inadequate provision of services for children. The goals of the study are to: 1) provide training in the conduct of behavioral interventions, research methodology, statistics, child development and adolescent psychiatry, to develop skills that will ensure the successful completion of the proposed study, and 2) obtain preliminary data that will be used to support a larger RCT of tinnitus in children. A larger RCT is necessary to improve the quality of care for children with tinnitus and to provide a stronger foundation for future translational research and development of tinnitus treatments in children. Participants (n = 40) will be recruited from the UC Davis Tinnitus Treatment Center and randomized to one of two treatment conditions, where one group will receive a non-invasive intervention to alter the salience of tinnitus (Heed and Risberg, 2003) while the other will receive a sham intervention. The primary dependent measures will be tinnitus-related distress and functional outcomes. The results from this study will provide the foundation for a larger, more rigorous RCT that will test the efficacy of non-invasive treatment strategies

System Requirements For Caribbean Shores Theme:

Please follow these rules and be as specific as possible. We might be able to do some kind of system-specific solution for you, but it's better if we just receive complete data. 1. Please post your ideas in bold and all in one post so we can quickly review them. Please do not post multiple posts, as one will suffice. 2. The phrase "Possible solution" does not mean we've already solved it. Even if your idea is a "Possible solution" to the problem, we may or may not be able
